

I Still Remember

Sunlight...
Shot through my memories,
The way the summer shines through the trees.

I'm alright—
Just need to roll my windows down,
Feel July on the breeze.

I still remember all the April rain,
The smell of spring in the emerald morning,
The distant headlights on the empty plain,
The October chill, all the leaves were falling,
And I...
I miss it all...

'Cause in my mind I know
The memories are falling away.
And no matter how the sun shines,
Seems darker than it was yesterday.

Blue skies...
Clouds look like highways—
So fearless and so free.

Close my eyes,
Let the memories flow,
And see the things that used to be.

I still remember January snow,
A silent world made of crystals glowing,
The warmth of August nights so long ago,
The purple skies and the stars a-showing,
And I...
I miss it all...

But I just can't go back—
I have to let it all slip away.
And though the sky is blue,
It's not as blue as it was yesterday.

Sunset...
Just like a rainbow—
All the colors in the sky.

Can't hold on
To memories forever—
Someday I have to let them die.

Always remember that there's beauty there—
Out in the world where there always will be.
Sometimes it's just enough to know there's light somewhere.
To still remember that it's part of me,
And I...
Am part of it all...
