

Sparks

Long nights and open miles have taken their toll—
I'm tired and I don't know if I can move on.
Drowned one too many times upon the ocean of love,
And washed up on the shore, all alone.

And in the darkness, in the cold
Still the headlights, taillights flow—
There's a thousand stories in the night
That I will never know.
And I don't want to live alone,
Leave my heart in walls of stone.
So won't you stay and listen to this song?

I'll light a spark for you tonight
From the fire in my heart—
Give the pieces of my life
That can shine through all the dark—
Show you all that's cold and broken,
All the warmth that's still inside.
So if you'll keep it burning bright,
I'll light a spark
For you...tonight.

The rain is falling harder than it ever has before,
And all that I can do is try to hold on,
And listen for my heart in all the sound of the storm,
And try to find my way all alone.

And in the black and frozen night,
Tired streetlights burning bright
Over faces searching for the love
That they may never find,
But I don't want to be alone
Until I lie beneath a stone,
So won't you tell me something I don't know?

And light a spark for me tonight—
Tell a story from your heart.
Swear I'll keep in burning bright,
And hold it close through all the dark—
When I'm cold and I am broken,
I'll stay warm and whole inside.
So will you stay with me a while,
And light a spark
For me...tonight.

To every heart
In the night,
You're not alone,
You'll be alright.
Show me your pain,
Show me your love,
Keep beating on,
Show me your light.

The road it just gets harder and we'll always be alone—
Somehow we must be strong enough to move on.
And still we have each other—we can light up the dark,
If we can all just light up a spark,

We'll set the world on fire tonight,
With the love that's in our hearts—
Stay forever burning bright,
Showing who we really are.
In a world that's cold and broken,
There is beauty in our lives.
So I will give a part of mine—
I'll light a spark.
For all...tonight.
